

Georgios Antoniadis

Profile

As a skilled junior developer and a graduate of the postgraduate program specializing in "Advanced Software Development Technologies" in the department of Computer Science of UoP, I am passionate about designing and implementing innovative software projects that push the boundaries of technological progress.

My particular interests lie in exploring both established and emerging techniques for building full-stack web applications, and I am committed to continuously improve my skills and knowledge through ongoing learning and development opportunities.

I have experience working collaboratively on software projects with both colleagues and fellow students and am proficient in several programming languages and tools. In my first steps, I have focused on programming based on good practices and design patterns, and I am excited to continue building on these foundations as I advance in my career.

In my career path so far, I have gained experience working with technologies such as Spring, Angular and relational databases. These tools helped me delve deeper into developing full-stack web applications and building stable and scalable solutions.
